Three longboarders from the VA/NC area have hit the pavement in a big way. They have embarked on a cross-country trek to raise money for the East Coast Round Wall Foundation in Washington, DC. Adam Colton, Shayne Rivers, and Chris Gregory are skating from Newport, Oregon to Springfield, Virginia. Adam and Chris will be skating the entire time (hoping to average around 50 miles per day) and Shayne will be driving the support vehicle, relief skating, and talking to girls.

This event has been in the making for over a year. The idea evolved from a three-month adventure into a full-scale fundraising effort for the East Coast Round Wall Foundation. This organization, based in Washington, DC, is building a skatepark out of recycled materials along with a learning and art center for the children of Anacostia
