

Rayne Longboards 2009 Avenger

Contributed by Rayne
Friday, 26 June 2009
Last Updated Monday, 29 June 2009

Rayne Longboards 2009 Avenger Featuring Pleasure Dome Concave June 19, 2009

The 2009 Avenger is now the newest board to have "Pleasure Dome" concave added to the already aggressive shape. The board is now smaller and lighter but has the same rigidity as previous models. The tighter platform makes quick maneuvering a dream - matched with the "dome" rider transition from stand-up speed checks to railing corners is mind blowing. Gone are the days of foot braking - wear out your wheels not your shoes!

What is the PLEASURE DOME? The PLEASURE DOME makes it easy for riders to master toe side corners, pre-drifts and slick stand-up slides by adding a second concave in the middle of the board! When engaged in sticky situations, this pleasure dome grips your toes where there is normally no concave. When in heel-side turns the pleasure dome ensures no foot slip.

Most companies offering W concaves include minimal board changes - they simply don't have the technology to press aggressive curves. Rayne has developed 3D pressing techniques that allow bamboo and fibreglass to mingle in harmony and give your feet the ergonomic support they deserve. The aggressive W inspired concave is big where you need it and minimal where you don't. Where don't you need it? When pushing!

Price: $148.00 (no change)

Specs: Bamboo core, biaxial pre-tensioned fibreglass skins.

Length- 38"

Width- 10"

Wheel Base- 28.25, 29, 29.25, 30"

www.raynelongboards.com

{vimeo}5342079{/vimeo}

The graphic was designed by Spanish artist Jee "humanflytattoo.com" and is inspired by his pet Woolly Mammoth and like Rayne it has a distain for anything that stands in its way.